HERO DAD SAVES SON FROM RHINO

Pretty victim almost died in bizarre cemetery ritual

Exorcist saves woman from vampire ghost!

By ALEX SCOTT

A ghostbuster with extraordinary powers of exorcism has saved a helpless young woman from a vampire spirit who was slowly sucking the energy out of her body.

The 23-year-old victim was headed for certain death until her worried boyfriend begged for help from Gennaro Briganti, the archenemy of ghosts in Italy.

Over a period of weeks, Antonio Guiseppe and his girlfriend, who wasn't identified in the newspaper report, Fiorina, had become pale, thin and living as if in a trance.

When Briganti saw "before" and "after" pictures of the doomed woman, he knew immediately that she was a victim of energetic vampirism, where the energy is slowly sucked out of a person by an evil ghost. "I knew the poor thing would surely die if I didn't act quickly," said Briganti.

"She had lost about 20 pounds and was so weak she could barely walk."

He and the woman's boyfriend began following her. One foggy night they watched as she went to a cemetery with a tall African woman named Limba.

Limba ordered the poor woman to take off her blouse and threw her arms around a tombstone near the middle of the graveyard.

As if in a trance, the woman obeyed. Then Limba began a strange, ritualistic dance, chanting, "Take, drink, suck all the energy you want but give me the numbers. Give me the numbers."

The pathetic young woman gloved to it. Suddenly she cried out in horrible pain and fainted.

Briganti and Guiseppe leaped from their hiding place, grabbed Limba and freed the unconscious woman from the gravestone.

The victim told police Limba had bought her expensive clothes and perfume, but later demanded repayment for the gifts.

"Limba had an amazing power over the helpless woman, who would do anything she asked," said Briganti, whose $1,000 to $3,000 per exorcism.

Briganti immediately realized Limba was possessed by a vampire ghost.

To free herself, she had to transfer the merciless spirit to someone else. By talking to the ghost within Limba, Briganti was able to convince it to let the young woman live.

Blind woman gets first glimpse of her kids — thanks to Good Samaritan

I CAN SEE!

By SUSAN JAMISON

Miracle mom Angela Waters glimpsed her four adorable children for the first time — thanks to a generous friend who gave her the precious gift of sight.

The 26-year-old brunette has been blind since she was a teen and had never seen her children Jason, 5, Kari, 3, Mikayla, 3 and Leon, 1. Last month surgeons transplanted the cornea of Angela's friend, retiree Mary Bedford, 62, into the young mother's left eye. Angela says that when the bandages came off, she was overwhelmed.

"It was the most magical moment of my life," the Scunthorpe, England, woman said. "I looked at their wonderful smiles and just broke down and wept.

"They look even lovelier than I had pictured. It's wonderful to watch their faces when I read them bedtime stories."

Angela's good fortune came after she was hospitalized recently for an operation and met Mrs. Bedford, who was blind in one eye herself because of a brain tumor.

But Mrs. Bedford's blind eye still contained a healthy cornea — and the elderly Good Samaritan decided to give it away.

"I realized that I could help a young woman who had never seen her children," Mrs. Bedford said afterwards. "It was the least I could do for them."

Angela underwent eye surgery several weeks ago and after days of recuperation, doctors took off her bandages. Her first wish was to see her precious babies and when she did, she wept tears of joy.

"It was a tremendous sacrifice for Mary Bedford to make," said Angela, who lost her eyesight at the age of 17 because of an eye disease.

"Now my dream has come true, thanks to Mary."

MIRACLE mom Angela Waters is now able to see her children Jason, Kari, Mikayla and baby Leon.

Bungling burglars blow up their loot

Kindhearted family takes in dope-crazed animals

Rest home for monkey junkies

By HELEN DODSON

Tim Goodale and his family share their large house with three poodles, two cockatiels, seven guppies — and 14 dope-crazed monkeys.

The drug and alcohol rehab counselor has set out to build a retirement home for junkie monkeys that have been used as scientific guinea pigs in drug testing programs.

Goodale, who works at the DePaul Hospital CareUnit in Bridgeton, Missouri, said frequent drug testing on hundreds of monkeys infuriates him.

"All of drug testing is done on primates," Goodale said. "They get totally addicted. They test their reactions with various drugs using no anesthetics.

"They're doing a lot of cocaine testing."

The rhesus refuge will look "like a large grocery store," Goodale said.

"It will be indoors, with lots of skylights and tropical plants."

The center will cost $100,000 a year to maintain, he said.

Many of the doped-up monkeys will come from the University of Arizona at Tucson's psychological testing program, which is being phased out.

Others will be referred by the Simian Society of America Inc., an animal rights group in St. Louis, he said.

"So far, we've been swamped with calls," Goodale said. "We'll have 60 monkeys within the next two to three months." The monkey farm will house 1,000 animals.

The Goodales' capuchin, squirrel and macaque monkeys are well-fed, munching on a steady diet of veggies, fruits and Monkey Chow, a mix of dehydrated fruits and vegetables. "At times, they eat better than we do," Goodale said.

"They like bagels, too," said Goodale's wife Robin.

The couple isn't stingy about forking out cash for monkey medical bills.

George, an 8-year-old cinnamon-tailed capuchin, recently had to have a few teeth taken out. The bill was $250.

The Goodales, however, are actively looking for sponsors to chip in financially with their project, the PIN Foundation, for "Primates in Need."

Tourists won't be welcome at the monkey farm, Goodale added.

Neither will AIDS-infected monkeys and those with dreaded communicable diseases.

"It's too much of a risk to the other monkeys."

MEATA, a 10-year-old monkey, plays with Randy Goodale, 9. The monkey is one of 14 at the Goodale monkey retirement home.

Crippled vet says he was wife's prisoner 8 years

By JACK ALEXANDER

A paralyzed Army vet claims he was held captive for eight years by his evil wife so she could get her greedy hands on his $4,000-a-month disability checks.

The helpless quadriplegic escaped from the torturous nightmare of beatings and abuse by smuggling a note out to his mother, who called cops in Klamath, Ill.

"He was sleeping on a mongrel bed in a rundown room with only a TV set for company when police found him," said state Attorney Greg Grigsby. "His fingernails were about 10 inches long. He badly needed a shave, but didn't appear to be malnourished," he said.

The crippled 36-year-old vet was rushed to a VA hospital for emergency gall bladder and rectum surgery while authorities checked out his unbelievable story.

"His allegations have a ring of truth to them," said Grigsby.

"His wife won't talk to us and has hired a lawyer. We're going to gather evidence and present the case to a grand jury."

The vet said he got married in 1979 and about a year later his wife, who is in her 40s, began running around with other men.

"He said she took away his wheelchair and his bed and wouldn't let him see the phone or write letters to his mother, brother and daughter," said Grigsby.

He was forced to endorse about $4,000 a month in social security and VA disability checks, said Grigsby. "His wife allegedly paid her suitors $200 a month to care for the poor man," he added.

The man's eight years of misery ended when he persuaded a neighbor boy to mail a letter to his mother.

"Mom, it's up to you to get me out of here," he wrote. "I can't get help on anymore."

BLONDE sex goddess fooled man, says Jo-Ann Trosler

MONROE SHOCKER!

I talk with Marilyn — on my Ouija board!

. . . says pretty 17-year-old

By WANDA WIGGINS

A pretty 17-year-old's revelation that dead sex goddess Marilyn Monroe communicates with her through a Ouija board almost got her kicked out of her parents' house!

Jo-Ann Trosler, who lives in Sutton, South London, with her parents and two brothers, said when British reporters discovered she talks to Marilyn through lengthy sessions, she got into a "heap of trouble."

"My family threatened to throw me out. They don't like the idea that I play with the Ouija board."

The beautiful young aspiring hard rock star told she thinks Marilyn is her big sister, reaching out to give her advice about men.

Jo-Ann is working as a salad maker in a neighborhood restaurant to earn a living. "I'm saving up for money," she confided to The NEWS.

Platinum blonde Marilyn, who tragically died from an Aug. 4, 1962 drug overdose, secretly hated men despite her sex goddess image, Jo-Ann said.

"Every time I speak to her, Marilyn makes it clear she doesn't like men," Jo-Ann confided. "She says, 'Jo, be careful. I love you. Don't let anyone ruin your life. You're too precious.'

"She says things like, 'Jo, I love you. Please be good.'"

The tantalizing teen emphasizes she is telling the truth, even though it embarrasses her parents.

"I'm not a stupid nut," she declared. "If I had the chance to prove it to you in person, I would. Some versions of this story have made me look like a stupid nut."

Jo-Ann likes to consult the Ouija board with her brother Stephen, 21, and her 19-year-old best friend, Paul Newbery.

Since this January, the team has held more than 30 two-hour seances, speaking to Marilyn.

"I know it sounds weird and people will think I'm a crackpot, but I'm not."

Blind man's guide dog is not welcome at nudist camp

A blind man is suing a nudist camp because officials won't let him sunbathe with a guide dog by his side!

"It's discrimination pure and simple," Thord Stern, 65, told reporters in Kalmar, Sweden. "As the only unsighted person who belongs to the club, I'm different — and they don't like it.

"It's not fair. Discrimination is supposed to be a thing of the past. And I'll sue for the right to bring my dog to camp."

Sten Wendel, co-founder of the health club, doesn't deny banning Stern's dog.

But he says the reason has nothing to do with discrimination. He claims Stern's German shepherd is jumpy and has already nipped one nude sunbather "where it hurts."

"I have nothing against dogs but used to seeing people without their clothes on.

"I wish there was some way I could accommodate Mr. Stern. But we have over 300 other members. I've got to look out for them, too."

Stern's suit, filed in Kalmar, seeks the equivalent of $10,000 in punitive damages plus unlimited access to club facilities — along with his dog Samson.

His case is scheduled to go to trial

Hotshot lawyer's a fraud!

By JACK ALEXANDER

A hotshot lawyer's past caught up with him in court when it was revealed he lied about finishing law school, passing the bar exam and getting a license to practice.

Michael Fontana was the fair-haired boy at a top Chicago law firm for 10 years until his shocking secret was revealed.

"His performance with us was simply first-rate, and until his revelations . . . there was not a single instance of unprofessional conduct to us," said Howard Shapiro, a senior partner in the prestigious firm.

Fontana, 33, came to the law offices of Sonnenschein Carlin Nath & Rosenthal in 1978 with sparkling academic credentials.

He said he had taken and passed the bar exam after graduating from college.

Shapiro later disclosed Fontana hadn't taken the bar exam because he lacked one credit hour toward graduation.

Shapiro wouldn't say how the young lawyer's lies could go undetected for 10 years, or whether the firm had ever checked his background.

Fontana's career came tumbling down in the courtroom of U.S. District Judge Paul Plunkett after the law firm asked permission to withdraw him from a case.

During questioning by the judge, it was revealed that Fontana had been fired after admitting his career had been built on a foundation of lies.

The law firm could have problems because of Fontana's stunning disclosures. A 1946 Illinois case says a law firm can be held liable for "negligence in failing to uncover irregularities" in its practices.

But Shapiro still had praise for the man who tricked them for 10 years.

"We knew him to be an absolutely decent, loving, enormously bright human being," said Shapiro. "We were very proud of him."

Fiery cigarette break!

A hospital patient's face was burned to a crisp when he fired up a cigarette while pure oxygen was flowing through tubes in his nose.

"Flames just pulled around his face," said Robert Zoda, acting battalion chief of the fire department in Trenton, N.J. "He's lucky this didn't kill him because his face was all burned and some sparks hit the bed."

Reports didn't say why Richard Pasluzzi, 64, was hospitalized in the first place. But after the blast he was moved to intensive care.

Psychic Astrologer

Brown-eyed psychic's a blue-eyed wonder!

Amazing psychic Jan Craddock doesn't need tinted contact lenses when she wants to make her brown eyes blue — she just uses a little ESP!

And it's not her irises that take on the deep, robin's-egg blue hue, it's her eyeballs!

By ROSE GRADY

It all began about 11 years ago when Jan, who lives in Atlanta, began to hear voices of spirit guides that were telling her it was about time for her to put her natural clairvoyant gift to a more meaningful use.

"At the time, I was thinking about doing psychic readings professionally," Jan told The NEWS.

"And I had the wild thought that if I was going to be professional, it was a shame I didn't have blue eyes, because all of my teachers had piercing blue eyes.

"Then the voices said, 'We'll give you blue eyes.' I didn't think anymore about it until a week later, while I was putting on my makeup, there it was — the whites of my eyes were robin's-egg blue!"

Worried that she might have a serious eye problem, she went to an ophthalmologist, who told her there are two diseases that can cause the whites of the eyes to take on a blue coloring.

"But he said the fact that I could walk into his office was proof that I had neither of those diseases," Jan added.

"He said that the diseases are crippling and the whiting of the eyes is one of the late stages."

Normally, Jan's eyes are brown.

But when she puts herself into an altered psychic state, the whites turn a beautiful shade of blue.

"The longer I'm in the altered state, the bluer they get," she said.

"And one eye often is bluer than the other, though it's not always the same eye."

While Jan has some theories about what causes the astonishing chameleonlike ability, she's the first to admit she has no solid answer.

"I'm happy that it happens," she said. "But the bottom line is I don't know why or how it happens."

EXPERTS are baffled by Jan Craddock's ESP skills.

Cat gets real estate license

To prove the National Association of Real Estate Appraisers is a bit sloppy in screening new members, Roy Schaeffer sent in an application and the $85 fee — and got his cat registered as a certified appraiser!

When his 8-year-old cat Toby (alias Tobias F. Schaeffer) got his gold-embossed appraiser's certificate and membership sticker, Schaeffer proved his point and got a barrel of laughs to boot. But the 10,000-member appraisers' association wasn't at all happy about having a kitty cat as a member. So it filed a $1 million suit against Schaeffer, the human, for registering Schaeffer, the cat.

"I just wanted to prove the association doesn't screen applicants," declared Schaeffer, an appraiser in Warwick, R.I.

She downs a pint of suds a day!

Tippling tyke refuses to go nighty-night without beer

By JOE BERGER

English little Nichola Evans is barely 2 years old, but the beer-crazy babe refuses to go beddy-bye — till she swigs her nightly pint of beer!

And the tipsy toddler often staggers her parents by downing her entire stein of suds in less than 10 minutes.

"Nicky really loves the stuff," her dumbfounded dad John Evans, 35, told reporters in Rotherham, England.

"I'll never understand how she puts it away so fast. She can almost outdrink me and I've had lots of practice."

But the curly-haired cutie doesn't settle for just beer at bedtime. She also loves to polish off a plate of tripe and onions or a heaping helping of black pudding — a sausage made of pig's blood and fat.

And thanks to her daddy's diet, mischievous Nicky already weighs a whopping 44 pounds, nearly twice the normal size for a child her age.

"People see us on the street and they want to know what we're feeding the kid," said the superfit mom Jackie, 22.

"We're stunned ourselves when we see the way she eats and the way she's growing. She's so big now I can barely hoist her in my arms."

The zesty moppet's nightly imbibing began one evening when her dad dipped her pacifier into his beer glass while trying to get her to fall asleep.

"She decided she really liked beer and now she won't go to sleep without it," said papa John.

"Even when we go out, she makes a grab for my beer mug, but we won't let her have it.

Stampeding elephants trample village

A thirsty herd of drunk-drunk elephants stampeded through a remote Indian village, bowling over homes and stomping people like bugs — in a frantic search for beer!

The plastered pachyderms had already slurped down a sea of suds and were trying to keep the party rolling when they thundered through little Rehuli, killing five people and injuring 12.

"The town looks like it was torn apart by a bomb or a terrible earthquake," said Assam to splinters and the only two cars in town were smashed flat.

"Witnesses said that these elephants were throwing people around like rag dolls."

The booze-crazy beasts were lured to the settlement by the potent troops of rice beer, a heady beverage the locals brew up each year after the first rice harvest.

"They came to the edge of the village and knocked the tops off the vats where the beer was stored," Ray said.

and they drank the vats dry. They must have drunk hundreds of gallons."

Then the two-ton tipplers roared through Rehuli, following the more beer — and flattening everything in their path.

"I was having my home-after lunch when the ground began to shake and I looked up and here they came," farmer Tushar Tiwari told reporters.

Principal fed up with fire-and-brimstone brood

By JACK ALEXANDER

A frustrated principal is still locked in a godawful battle with three little kids who he kicked out of school for their fire-and-brimstone preaching — and for calling his teachers "whoremongers."

The pint-sized preachers — Duffy, 10, Matthew, 5, and sister Pepper Strode, 6, made national headlines and TV news when they were suspended three times from an elementary school in Marion, N.C.

And if they don't stop belting out Bible scriptures around school grounds when their suspensions are up, they'll be booted out again.

"I have sied with this man," said School Superintendent David Rickets, referring to the kids' dad, David Strode, 40. "I know it looks crazy to suspend a kindergartner, but the preaching is not the issue."

The teachers resent being labeled as "whoremongers."

"We haven't put them up to preaching, it's their own idea," said the children's mother, Wilma Strode, 37.

"They know there are people in that school who are unsaved. They're just trying to make them know that there's a hell."

"There are teachers in that school who are living in sin with

She quoted the scripture Hebrews 13:4, as [illegible] ing, "Marriage is honorable [illegible] all and the bed undefiled: [illegible] whoremongers and adulterers God will judge."

Scripture or not, principal Jim Grant and the teachers aren't too happy with the name-calling. It has caused stress, he said.

Grant claims the children's behavior is disruptive, but Mrs. Strode says her kids preach on a public sidewalk 75 yards from the school before classes begin.

Despite crank phone calls, threatening letters and possibly more suspensions, Mrs. Strode said her youngsters will continue to preach "God's word."

"They were all making A's and B's in school when this started," she said.

"We're getting their homework assignments from their teachers and they're working with us at home.

"They are really good children.

$17 million lottery granny vows: Money won't change me!

A loving granny worth $17 million lives like a penny-pinching pensioner but likes to go cruising in her racy Trans Am!

Helen Gueli, 75, of Methuen, Mass., is the biggest single lottery winner in her state's history! And she drives a white Trans Am because she enjoys racing the Pontiac!

When State Treasurer Robert Crane handed the shocked winner her first $450,151 check, her four kids and 10 grandkids screamed, "Yeah, all right, Nana!"

The granny will get 20 annual payments that are the rest of her life.

"She was absolutely stunned. There's no question about it," said David Ellis, spokesman for the Massachusetts State Lottery Commission.

Before she won, the granny lived on modest Social Security payments. "I've been living on it; why

Big bucks businessman tells Mick Jagger:

I WANT YOUR ASH!

TOUGH DECISION ... will Jagger ... or make a bundle by selling his body

Tycoon offers $30 million for rock star's dead body

An Austrian businessman has made rock superstar Mick Jagger a bizarre offer — he will give the rubber-lipped singer a mind-boggling $30 million right now for Mick's body after he dies.

Incredibly, businessman Guenther Roth believes he can make $300 million by cremating Mick's rolling bones, stuffing the ashes into little hourglasses and selling the grisly mementos to the rocker's fans.

"We want to use pure ashes," says Guenther, president of the Trend Foundation. "Mick is the best symbol for a whole generation of rebellion in music. And this is a chance for him to become a symbol for eternity at his death."

Guenther's ghoulish plan is to sell fat cat fans of Mick "share certificates" promising them one of the world-famous cubes once the Rolling Stone has fallen 100 to 1,000 of the glasses. And he hopes to sell the souvenirs for up to $300,000 each. Mick hasn't accepted the offer, but a spokesman in London says he's chatting it over.

"It's going to be a heavy thing for Mick to figure out and give an answer," says the spokesman. "Even if it is in death, what a hassle to value shape — his body or his money!" — London Sun

New 007 slugs a thug to protect his gal pal

The big screen's dynamic new James Bond, Timothy Dalton, took a page out of a 007 script when he clobbered a thug who was threatening his gal pal leggy actress Vanessa Redgrave.

The dapper 41-year-old Tim was about to enter the stage door at the London theater where he and Vanessa are rehearsing in a play when he was jumped by a burly, red-bearded, skinhead thug.

The attacker thumped a string of four-letter words about Vanessa while taking a swing at Tim. But the hulkster ducked and dodged the wild punch.

Then Tim landed a double-fisted [illegible] that sent the lout's drooling frame sprawling into the cops.

"Timothy decided to talk to the police," explained the manager of the play. "He can look after himself, but he was concerned for her."

Later, Scotland Yard investigators found a notebook in which the attacker had scribbled threats against Vanessa. Police fear the attack could be linked to the recent bombing of another theater and the spate of political [illegible] of late.

Meanwhile, brave Tim brushed off the incident telling stagehands:

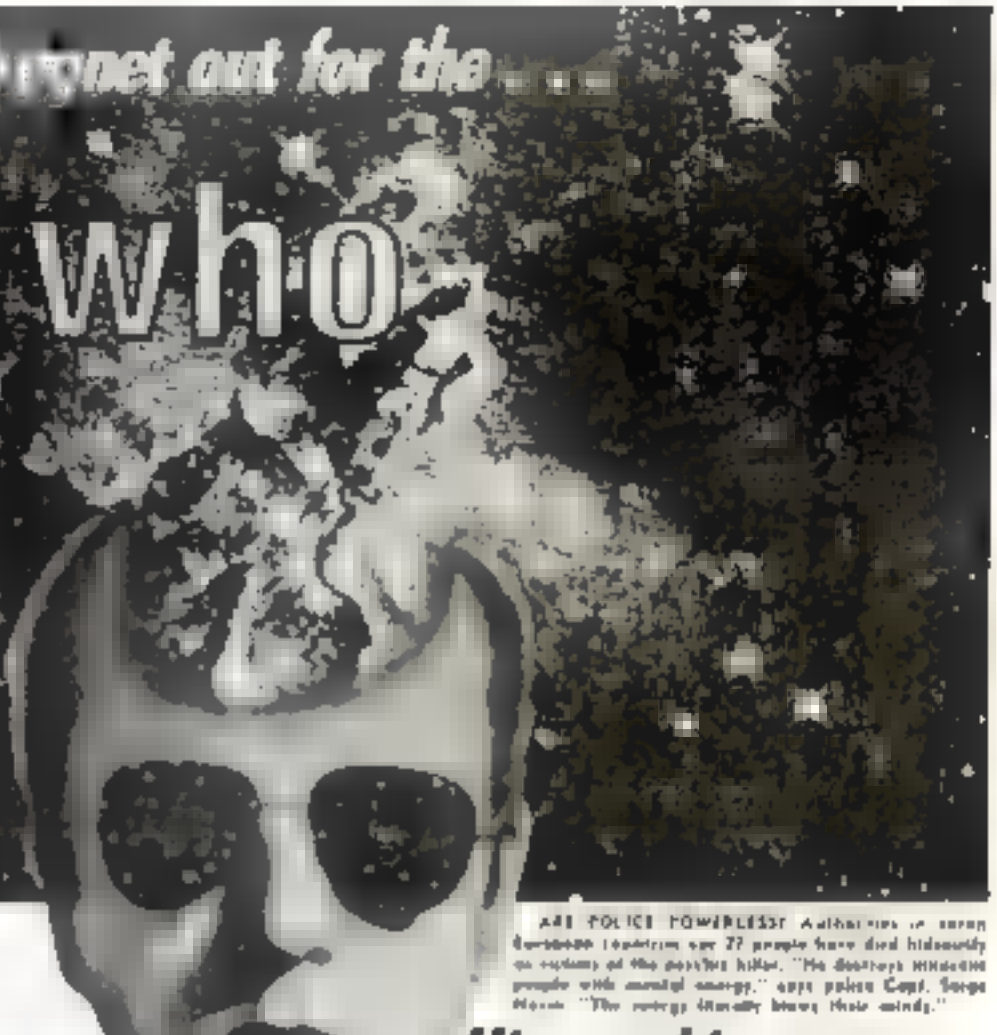
Man who kills with his mind



ALL POLICE POWERLESS! Authorities in seven European countries say 27 people have died hideously as victims of the psychic killer. "He destroys innocent people with mental energy," says police Capt. Serge Nevin. "The energy literally blows their minds."

His psychic energy made victims' brains burst out of their skulls

Police in seven countries are hunting a psychic killer — a man who murders with his mind!

"Twenty-seven people have died and more will follow if this man is not apprehended immediately," police Capt. Serge Nevin told reporters in Marseilles, France.

"Unfortunately, we have very little to go on. The murderer goes by many names. He carries no weapon and has no motive. He destroys innocent people with psychic energy — energy that literally blows their minds."

By KEVIN FISHER

Police first began to think they were dealing with an extraordinary killer after the mysterious deaths of a banker and his wife in Dusseldorf, West Germany.

Autopsies revealed that the couple perished simultaneously when their brains exploded from within.

A pair of businessmen died in the same fashion in Austria a week later.

Investigators then learned that as many as 23 other men, women and children had met similar fates in Greece, Italy, France, Yugoslavia and Bulgaria over the past 14 months.

That's when they realized they were looking for the same man.

The single eyewitness to one of the murders said she and a friend met the psychic killer in a fashionable bar in Paris.

He introduced himself as Jean-Marc — giving his last name — and said that he was in the computer business, Capt. Nevin said.

"The witness said he was a charming man up until the minute he murdered her friend," he continued. "She said they had just stepped outside the bar when the man turned. It's been so rare knowledge.

"He then held his arm straight out, with his fingers pointed at the victim's face. His eyes open, he spun around and turned to call back to his friend. Within seconds the woman screamed, doubled over and hit the sidewalk — dead."

The killer fled on foot and disappeared, said the cop. An autopsy revealed that virtually every cell in the victim's brain had swelled and burst "as if they had been covered with a torch," Capt. Nevin said. "The killer is a sharp man, under five feet tall.

"He always wears sunglasses and has black hair," he continued.

"So far that's all we have to go on."

AIDS epidemic turns cannibals into vegetarians

HEADHUNTERS TURNING INTO HEALTH FOOD FREAKS

One tribe was wiped out by the disease, scientist says

By IRWIN STERN

Cannibals who used to relish human flesh now shun the delicacy because they are terrified of catching AIDS.

"These savages may be ultra-primitive but they aren't totally uninformed," Dr. Ragnar Bergman, an anthropologist just returned to Stockholm, Sweden.

"They know what AIDS is and they know how it is transmitted. That's why it's a safe bet they won't eat human flesh again."

Vegans are in great demand, he added. Most head-hunting cannibals have gone vegetarian and are gobbling up fruit, vegetables, fruits and seed.

The decision to change their traditional diet stems partly from the fear of contracting AIDS from the gay group that has moved into the area, but mostly from a fresh look at the aspect and.

That's not to say people are no longer at risk when encountering cannibals. In remote tribes they are the only danger.

Just last month a wildlife photographer was found tied to a tree in Burma with a human skull around his neck. The cannibals had turned him into a living billboard.

"The skull is a grim cannibal warning that means: 'Don't eat.'" Dr. Bergman, who is considered to be one of the world's leading authorities on primitive societies and African and South American rainforests, feels the same way.

Human flesh, once revered as a source of great power, has residents become taboo throughout the world, he said.

"Thanks to AIDS, we are witnessing the death of one of the world's oldest and strangest cultural systems," he added. "And it's sad."

Man gored 14 times in bare-handed battle with 3,000-pound monster

Hero dad saves son from raging rhino!

By WANDA WIGGINS

"Please, God, let me save my child!"

That was the only thought screaming through the mind of courageous Dr James Smith as he was gored 14 times by a rogue rhino in the steamy jungles of Nepal while battling to save his 4-year-old son from the raging beast.

In what is being hailed in Nepal Chitwan National Park reports as "one of the greatest acts of bravery this country has ever witnessed," the 48-year-old wildlife and fisheries professor from the University of Minnesota defied all odds in fighting off the 3,000-pound monster after it attacked his son.

According to Dr Smith's wife Francine, reached by The NEWS at a hospital in Kathmandu where her critically injured husband is recovering, the nightmare began as Dr Smith, two native field assistants and his son Alex collected small animals for a research project.

"We had come to a small opening in the forest," Dr Smith said, "and stopped to rest. It is extremely hot and humid in this part of the jungle.

"I noticed all of a sudden the birds stopped singing and the insects stopped chirping. And there it was.

"All of a sudden the huge rhino crashed through the trees and headed straight for my son.

"My assistants grabbed him at the last moment and pushed him out of the way. Then the monster turned with a bellow and came straight at me.

"I knew if I was killed that Alex was as good as dead. The assistants had fled into the Kid's kite chases 40 jets from sky over busy airport!

Paris commercial jumbo jets were forced to change their flight plans — because of a high-flying kite.

A shocked pilot spotted the 3-foot-long kite with a 30-foot red tail as he attempted to land at Heathrow Airport outside London, England.

He alerted air traffic controllers who ordered other aircraft to stay clear of the area.

Lottery bonanza touches off alleged murder plot

Cops: Greedy niece hired hit men to hurry up her inheritance!

By PETE COOKE

Authorities say a greedy niece hired a pair of 300-pound men to beat her elderly aunt and uncle to death so she could inherit their $1 million lottery jackpot.

Police in San Antonio, Tex., charged Linda Heredia, a 34-year-old nurse, with solicitation for murder in the brutal attack on her uncle, Armando Vasquez, 67, and aunt, Norma Vasquez, 66.

Vasquez, a retired New Jersey sheet metal worker, and his wife became millionaires when they spent a dollar on a New York State Lottery ticket and won $1,778,256 in May 1983.

The couple immediately returned to its multimillion-dollar home in Middletown, N.J., and spent much of their time traveling. Investigators said the lot

According to authorities, Linda Heredia was the couple's favorite niece and would have inherited the bulk of their estate when they died, but she couldn't wait.

Instead cops say the hired 225-pound mechanic Henry Hellstine, 38, and his 17-year-old nephew Joe Hernandez, who weighs 300 pounds, to kill her aunt and uncle while they were on San Antonio for a visit.

Hellstine was promised $65,000 to start his own wrecker service, while Hernandez was supposed to get a $2,000 customized guitar for the job, police said.

Vasquez and his wife were invited to Mrs. Heredia's home for a spaghetti dinner on the night of the attack according to authorities. As the couple prepared to leave to go back to their motel, cops said, Mrs. Heredia asked them to leave by the back door and they were ambushed in the backyard. Vasquez was beaten and strangled with a wire. Mrs. Vasquez was beaten, but escaped the attack with minor injuries.

Mrs. Heredia, Hellstine and Hernandez were all charged with solicitation for capital murder, murder for hire and aggravated robbery.

HIRED Linda Heredia is accused of brutal attack.

Wrongly-convicted guy sent to prison 17 years ago

Ex-detective finally clears innocent man!

By JACK ALEXANDER

Dogged detective work by a relentless ex-cop cleared a happily-married family man who had spent six years in prison for a robbery he didn't commit.

Charles Blake, 42, is free and now back with his wife and daughter in Springfield, Mass., because retired police Lt. Robert Seymour believed in his innocence.

"I knew Charles didn't pull the armed robbery, but I couldn't get anybody to listen to me," said Seymour.

The day Blake was convicted and sentenced to 10 to 15 years in prison in 1971, Seymour got a phone call from an informant.

"You guys really screwed that Blake kid," the informant told Seymour. "He didn't do the armed robbery. A guy named James Kelly did."

[illegible] legs recently have also been ruled on the Blake case.

Blake languished in prison for three years before escaping while on furlough in 1974. He stayed free for 11 years until cops captured him in Washington, D.C.

Meanwhile, Seymour retired from the Springfield, Mass., force after 26 years. Kelly was imprisoned in Canada for another robbery, until he was returned to Massachusetts in 1988 to serve time for yet another crime.

"I went to see Kelly in prison and he confessed in writing on a paper towel that he committed the robbery Blake was accused of," said Seymour.

A month later Seymour and newspaper reporter Richard Nadolny visited Kelly and tape-recorded a 35-minute confession.

Tot trapped 3 days with dying mom

A courageous tot was trapped in an apartment with his dying mother for three terrifying days while he tried to alert neighbors by throwing toys through a mail slot in the front door.

By the time police were summoned, it was too late to save Christine Smith, 33, who died of deadly meningitis. But officers credited 3-year-old Philip with doing everything that promises said the child's actions was humanly possible to save his mom.

Piecing together what had happened Bath, England authorities said the child's ordeal began when Christine, who was pregnant, collapsed in their apartment.

Realizing her mother was ill, Philip cradled her in his tiny arms.

He left her only to go to the mail slot and push his favorite toys through in an attempt to tell passersby something was wrong.

But nobody got the child's message until it was too late.

According to Police Chief Inspector James McAleer, the youngster came within hours of saving his mother's life.

"That is all desperately sad," added the chief. "This little lad behaved with great courage."

Philip was too small to open the door of the apartment and couldn't open the windows to call for help. Neighbors saw the child looking through the windows and peeking through the mail slot. But they didn't think anything was wrong until calls by the worried pet dog set off the alarm.

When police arrived and broke down the door, Philip looked at them and said gravely, "My mommy is asleep inside."

"She fell out of bed and won't wake up."

Hazel Hobson, 23, who lives in the apartment above the Smith's, said she saw toys on the doorstep. "But I had no idea he was trapped."

Another neighbor, Tracey Hilliard, declared, "I saw Philip looking out of the letterbox. But I just thought he was an inquisitive little boy."

Apartment superintendent Kevin Hope added, "He kept shouting, 'Hello Mailer' and rattling the mail slot. I thought perhaps something was wrong. When I saw an ambulance I was horrified."

He told me he was a foot doc but he turned out to be a heel

Send letters to Dear Dotti, Weekly World News, 600 South East Coast Ave., Lantana, FL 33462

Dear Dotti: For years I was troubled with my feet, but no one, especially my husband, thought that my poor feet really were hurt. I just suffered until my husband died, then, since I was left pretty well off, I finally went to a foot doctor.

That doctor was the first person to take my problems seriously. He started treating me and I started looking forward to his weekly appointments.

It wasn't long before I knew I loved him. I thought he felt the same way especially when he suggested I move to Florida to be near his office.

It's been two years now and there were times I have just about taken all the money my husband left me.

I finally told the doctor I had to cut way back on my spending. He got so upset and told me to find another doctor.

It's just helping me up so he can lord it over me and I'm still hurting.

Do you think he really meant for me to see the dollar signs? — Tee Hee Piggins, Kentucky

Dear Tee Hee: Piggins? It's cruel, cruel, people can be! Are the authorities about him to be read a charge of driving people out of their minds? Anyway, you don't go for any more foot doctoring. Stay far far away from all podiatrists! And if you see the guy send 2 round our way. Dreamship to him. We'll get him to pay for this — I promise you, honey. — Dotti

Dear Dotti: I married a great guy two years ago and we're still deeply in love. But lately he's been getting very friendly with a female co-worker. He says it's just a friendship, but I'm not so sure. I'm afraid I'm losing him. What should I do? — Worried Wife

Dear Worried: Spend more time with him. Show him you're interested in his work. Be sure to look your best when he comes home. Don't nag him about the other woman. Be sweet and loving and he'll realize that you're the one he really loves. — Dotti

Some sleaze's trying to steal my man

Dear Dotti: About a year ago I had a dark cloud over me but it's right all down the road. But lately it's not been so great with him. He's started hanging out with the guys after work and he's been coming home drunk. He says he's just having fun with the guys, but I'm afraid he's fooling around with other women.

What should I do? — Lonely Wife

*Dear Lonely: Don't nag him about drinking. Be sweet and kind. Make him feel guilty for staying out late. Tell him you're afraid he's fooling around with other women. Tell him you're afraid he's fooling around with other women. Tell him you're afraid he's fooling around with other women

Victim's widow replies to vicious killer's mercy plea

'You can go rot in hell!'

"I ask that when your existence comes to an end . . . I ask in the name of my dead husband who you killed . . . that your soul rot in hell forever!"

WIDOW Bonnie Lamm hugely got her chance to talk.

With those bitter words and with hate blazing in her hazel eyes, widowed Bonnie Lamm lashed out at Sammy Valentin, the beast who shot her 74-year-old husband dead as he sat handcuffed to a chair.

After waiting patiently for 21 months, Bonnie Lamm finally got her chance to speak her mind when Valentin was sentenced to 180 years in prison by Bronx Supreme Court Judge John Tromberg in Indianapolis.

Valentin and two other convicts were convicted of separate trials for a July 1984 crime spree that resulted in the murders of Lamm and 30-year-old cab driver Paul Barone.

Valentin, 21, spent an hour on the stand trying to convince Judge Tromberg that he's really a good Christian boy who is sorry for what he did.

Then Deputy Prosecutor David Clark addressed Bonnie Lamm.

"I told you you would have a chance to talk," he said to her. "This is it."

As Valentin slumped in the chair his eyes riveted on the floor, the 36-year-old widow made the most of her chance.

"Look me in the eye, you bastard," she screamed at the young killer, pounding a table with her fist.

"You animal! May God forgive you for what you did. I never will."

Not once did Valentin raise his eyes to meet Bonnie's.

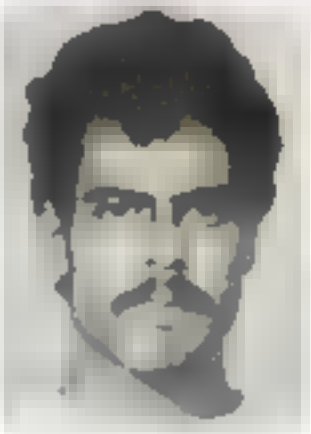
"He's a coward," she said. "He couldn't look me in the eye. He just sat there and listened to me tell the world that I knew he was the one who killed my husband. And he knew that I knew."

For Bonnie, the chance to speak put an end to a 21-month nightmare that began when Valentin and his pals — 40-year-old Antonio Salcedo-Reyes and 36-year-old Freddie Camacho — robbed the couple's antique establishment and left her husband dead.

"It was good for me to have my say," she said. "I didn't think it would ever be over. But I had a chance to say what I wanted to say. Now I can live.

"Red Sammy will be 81 before he can even ask for parole. He's a little cutie. What's he going to do in prison with all those hard-core dudes to cheer with him?

"He's going to be so old a cut



KILLER Sammy Valentin got a tongue-lashing in court.

College kids collapse after setting record

Four bodies recovered from UFO wreck – in 1947!

By RADAR GUNN

A British politician says the U.S. government recovered the bodies of four extraterrestrials and the wreckage of their starship in 1947 — and he has the secret report to prove it!

"The United States has been involved in a massive cover-up of alien contact for better than 40 years," said the politician, who asked to remain anonymous when he gave copies of the document to reporters in the House of Lords.

"This is bigger than any mere Watergate," he added. "This is a cosmic Watergate — and it's time the truth was told."

The papers, signed by President Harry Truman who ran the dual alien were addressed to the most powerful figures in Britain.

Then Prime Minister Clement Attlee got a copy, as did Winston Churchill, King George VI, the Queen Mother and select members of the House of Lords.

The leaders' reactions reportedly ranged from shock and amazement to outright fear. The document itself revealed the need to keep the recovery operation secret to avoid a massive religious backlash and worldwide panic.

It went on to describe the extraterrestrials in chilling detail.

Four small human-like beings apparently ejected from the craft before it exploded and crashed in America's southwest," said the report.

"All four were dead and decomposed due to predators and exposure to the elements before their discovery.

"The beings were between four and five feet tall.

"They were light-filling silver jumpsuits. Their hands were disproportionately large, with almond-shaped human eyes, slanted in the head.

Angry mom says her son's gym teacher told her students:

Run laps — or kiss my feet!

By JACK ALEXANDER

Angry mom Sherry Schluter blew her stack when her son's seventh-grade gym teacher gave him a choice of running a lap — or kissing her feet.

"My son, fortunately, is not an athlete. He ran a lap around the school track," said Mrs. Schluter. "Can you imagine 36 who didn't like the feel of [illegible] teacher Kathy Stewart rather than run a lap.

The incident occurred during the last class period of the day at Lake Hill Intermediate School in San Diego, Calif., according to Mrs. Schluter.

School principal Dr. Al Carter referred questions pertaining to the parents' charges to the district school board. No one there would talk to the NEWS.

"When I first told Dr. Carter about what happened, he thought I was kidding," said the bopping mad mom. "When I assured him it was no joke, he asked me to put my complaint in writing.

"I did."

The teacher didn't deny offering the kids the bizarre choice, said Mrs. Schluter. "She said it was their idea and she just went along with it."

At a meeting with school officials and parents, Kathy Stewart admitted using bad judgment, according to Mrs. Schluter.

"I think I would agree with that," said the super miffed mother.

"What she did was absolutely disgusting. I'm appalled and very mad."

Mrs. Schluter said the same offer was made to students in another gym class by the same teacher.

About half of those kids kissed her feet.

And the furious mom won't be satisfied with just an apology.

"I want an apology for what happened," said the peeved parent. "And I want that teacher fired."

CAMPUS CAPER ENDS IN CALAMITY

College man falls for his girlfriend

By SUSAN JIMISON

Rodney Bufford Jr. fell hard for his girlfriend Sheila Roberson — four stories, to be precise.

The 22-year-old man was apparently visiting her after hours in a women's dorm at the University of Southern Mississippi and fell from a ledge while trying to make his escape.

Fortunately, Bufford suffered only a broken jaw, and fractures of the face and arms in the college caper.

"He was in the dorm past visiting hours and was spotted by students and reported," university public relations spokesman Sid Conner told The NEWS.

"Campus security did a room-to-room search.

"Bufford climbed out a window on the fifth floor and hung by his fingers from a 9-inch ledge on the fourth floor.

"He was spotted by security and they called the fire department, but Bufford got tired and lost his grip before help came."

University officials have said they won't press charges against Bufford, a former college student, because he's suffered enough from his adventure. The young man is in cast from fingers to elbows and has his jaw wired shut.

According to Hattiesburg police and witnesses, the dormitory disaster took place about 2 a.m. on a Sunday morning. Dorm residents called campus police to report they had seen a young man in Pulley Hall, a women's dorm.

It was past visiting hours and the students were alarmed, officials said.

A police search of the dormitory rooms didn't turn up an intruder, but afterward, cops spotted Bufford clinging by his fingertips to a ledge high above the ground.

"We saw this guy hanging from Pulley," said one of the dorm residents, Carla Guffrey. "Security guards ran over to him and told him to hold on.

"We didn't know if he was trying to commit suicide or what. Finally he just let go and fell. I saw him hit the ground — it was horrible."

Emergency workers rallied to the scene and said that if Bufford had hit the concrete sidewalk he probably would not have survived. As it was, he landed in a bushes positioned on grass, battering his wrists and face in the fall.

He was hospitalized for several days following the incident and then released. He suffered no lasting injury.

"It was just a tragic accident," said university Dean of Student Development, Joe Paul. "We're satisfied that this situation was handled in the best possible way and there's no reason to press charges. The recovery is likely to be a long one, though."

Audience rescues fire-eater from blazing blunder

Nightclub patrons came to the rescue of a fire-eater, dousing flames on his face, hands and arms after something went wrong during his act.

Christopher Mansfield and his assistant, Robert Thomalin, were rushed to a hospital in Westhaven, Mass., after both were burned during their show in the lounge of the Marriott Hotel.

Mansfield, 27, "did a few things with his wand to begin the show.

"He had a mouthful of fluid and some of it dripped from his chin and his chest caught on fire."

Ireland said the audience was taken aback from the stage, and Mansfield, 27, "did a few things with his wand to begin the show.

Thomalin started yelling for help. When Thomalin, 34, tried to put out the fire on Mansfield, some of the flammable liquid spilled on him and he caught fire, too.

Quick-thinking Ireland grabbed Thomalin as he ran off the stage and wrestled him to the ground, rolling him over and over to put out the flames.

Mutts take van on a doggone joyride

Housewife Evelyn Hall got a real shock when a speeding van knocked into her house. But she got an even bigger shock when she discovered the runaway van was being driven by a dog!

Neither the pooch behind the wheel nor the mutt riding with him was hurt in the crash.

The hijacking hounds apparently released the hand brake while romping around inside a neighbor's van and sent the vehicle rolling downhill toward the Hall home in Quarry Bank, England.

"It was just like a Candid Camera stunt," said Hall said. "Stupidly, I asked them if they were okay."

Choking victims save themselves

Choking victims don't need help to receive the Heimlich maneuver — they can do it themselves!

To save their own lives, people in distress can use their fists or a firm surface like a chair back to force air quickly from their abdomen and clear breathing passages, according to an expert.

"The victim should press the upper abdomen quickly over a firm surface such as the back of a chair, side of a table or porch railing," said Dr. Henry J. Heimlich, who invented the lifesaving procedure.

Dr. Heimlich also advised making a fist with one hand, placing the thumb side on the abdomen above the navel, grasping the fist with the other hand and pressing upward and upward toward the diaphragm with a quick motion.

Good heavens, what a crowd!

Greetings my 18 billion Christians have made it to heaven since the world began!

MARC Europe, a branch of America's Missions Advanced Research and Computer Center, heard the figure on the number of Christians who have lived and died throughout history.

MARC experts estimate that only Christians get in heaven, which means that the 900 billion non-Christians who have died over the ages are somewhere else.

Incredible! Accident victim regenerates limbs after car crash

Miracle man grows a new arm and leg!

GETTING HER LICKS IN

A cow at Rose Myrtle Farm near Sumter, S.C., looks like she's about to give the photographer a real tongue-lashing.

BY RAGAN DUNN

A man who lost an arm and a leg in a car crash stunned doctors when he sprouted a new pair of limbs!

Everybody wants me to say something about it — but what on earth can I say?" Dr. Claudette Tinnat told reporters in Bourges, France.

Within regenerative cells parts to replace his lost limbs, but I've never heard of a human being doing it. At least not until now.

The quiet-hedging medical miracle began to unfold after Richard Sportsman fell asleep at the wheel of his car and crashed into a parking meter while driving to work in Sacramento, California, last November.

Attempts to reattach the limbs were unsuccessful, and when Sportsman regained consciousness Dr. Tinnat told him that the best surgeons could do was fit him with a pair of artificial limbs.

But a few weeks later, to the doctor's surprise, he noticed tiny protrusions on the patient's right arm and left leg.

Mr. Sportsman immediately refused to believe what he would have to go through life as an amputee.

He kept his stumps in the sun and soon with steady, downward growth. He had his own good arms and two good legs all his life — and that's not going to change now.

"What happened next I still have a hard time believing," he said. "Within a week the appendages were much bigger and had the shape of the limbs they ultimately would become to replace."

Now six months later, the young man's arm and leg are close to full size.

He has about 10 percent use of them at the moment.

But Dr. Tinnat expects that percentage to improve with time.

"We are looking for a physiological explanation for the regeneration of these limbs," she said.

"But to tell you the truth, I don't think we're going to find a thing.

"I spoke to a psychiatrist who thinks we'll be better off seeking a psychological explanation.

"He thinks the answer, if there is one, lies in the power of this young man's will and hope!"

Hollywood heartthrob Paul Newman has been married 30 years

PAUL NEWMAN and his 30th anniversary this year

TRIVIA

By JACK ALEXANDER

Eccentric comic W. C. Fields was so paranoid of losing big bucks if a bank went broke that he deposited all his millions in hundreds of banks throughout the world.

And in Hollywood where marriages are often measured in weeks or months, superstar Paul Newman and actress Joanne Woodward are an exception. The couple will celebrate their 30th anniversary this year.

[illegible] age that may surprise and treat your pals. Here are more from the Weekly World News trivia library.

● For folks don't start trouble. Shakespeare said it first, but Washington Irving said it plainly: "Whoever heard of fat men bending reins or hacking together in turbulent [illegible]?"

● No one ever said life was fair. The man who invented the shoelace made $2.5 million on his patent, but the guy who invented the safety pin made a paltry $400.

● We have all dealt with that stupid governmental red tape. The "red tape" expression comes from the color of the tape used around official documents in the 17th century in England.

● Each year in America 800,000 adolescents [illegible] and females) become hookers.

● Some of these teenage prostitutes may even be among the 1/3 out of 10 kids who graduate from high school.

● Barbers have cut down the time it takes to give haircuts in the last 25 years from 45 to 30 minutes.

● Many of you may identify with the one of five airline passengers who now wait 1½ hours for their pilots after they've checked in.

● Mickey Mouse is celebrating his 60th birthday this year, but the famous Walt Disney cartoon character was nearly called Mortimer Mouse before Disney settled on Mickey as the name of his creation.

● St. Patrick was credited with driving the snakes out of Puerto Rico.

● One shot glass filled with a poison called diotrinta botulinum could wipe out the entire human race if precisely distributed.

● Only three of the 11 species of crocodiles eat people when they can catch 'em. They are the saltwater crocodile, the African Nile crocodile and the American alligator.

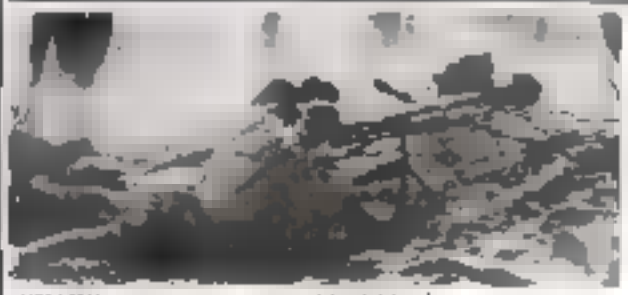
Soldier knew exact time of his death



HELLISH trench warfare during World War I

By DICK DONOVAN

On the eve of the bloodiest battle of World War I, British Army Lt. David Weatherby huddled in a trench only yards from the German front line — knowing that an enemy bullet would soon end his young life!

"Sergeant, I'm going to be killed tomorrow," he told the man crouching beside him.

Turning to his comrade, a wistful smile on his boyish face, Weatherby touched a finger to his forehead at a point just between his eyes.

"I know I'm going to get it here," he said.

Decades later, ex-Sergeant Arthur Smith sat in his home in Leicestershire, England, fingering a worn and faded kit from time and recalling a true war story stranger than fiction.

The bizarre tale began in the spring of 1915 on the blood-soaked battlefields just north of the French village of Loos, where the British had been forcefully bulging its Fifth Division until big artillery guns signaled that a big push was imminent.

At the edge of a forest, a dug-in platoon of the Welsh Regiment was digging in and fortifying the area with barbed wire, determined that when Fritz made his move, the Tommies would give more than they got.

The platoon was made up mostly of fair-ruddy-cheeked coal miners from the coal pits of South Wales. Their leader was Lt. David Weatherby, a 22-year-old with only six months' service and just four months' experience leading soldiers into combat. But he had already gained the respect of his men with his cool courage under fire. He had emerged unscathed from a hail of bullets to lead a wounded buddy to safety.

Even the most decorated officers looked like a golden opportunity for a sniper's bullet, and Weatherby knew that.

But on the eve of the bloody battle of Loos, the young lieutenant confided to his friend Arthur Smith that he knew he was going to die.

. . . and showed his body where the bullet would strike

He said he knew the time and place he was to be killed tomorrow. The aged veteran recalled. He said, I know that. And I know that you are going to make it. I'm depending on you to take the chaps to safety, but as for me, all pass on to my people . . . but, for God's sake, burn my diary. I don't want my mother to know how things have been out here.

Then he said, 'You'll find 300 francs in my wallet. . . keep 100 francs and divide the rest among the other lads.'

With that, he got up and struggled off down the trenches."

The German push began early the next morning and from the start, things went badly for the Allies. Enemy shells fell like rain into the Welsh trenches.

That evening, when the Tommies went out to collect their dead and dying, Sgt. Smith found his young lieutenant lying on a shell-hole. A German bullet had crashed into his forehead . . . at the exact spot he had pointed to the day before.

"THE BULLET WILL STRIKE ME HERE," said Army Lt. David Weatherby as he pointed between his eyes. And sadly, the young officer was right.

Gizmo tells how sweet you are!

If even the dog has been avoiding you lately and you're afraid it's your breath, breathe easy — the Hi-Hi Sensor is on the way to make life easier.

The new contraption, developed in Tokyo, measures exactly gases and will tell you whether your breath smells good, fair, poor or downright terrible.

"If the sensor says your breath is 'poor,' you'd better clean your teeth or wash your mouth with oral deodorant," says a spokesman for Qantas Pharmaceutical Co. "If it says 'bad,' you'd better see your dentist."

But this new form of social insurance doesn't come cheap. Suggested retail price for the Hi-Hi Sensor is $139, which is a lot of money to know how sweet you smell.

Magic bullets blast cancer!

An amazing breakthrough in cancer research has saved the lives of two victims stricken with deadly brain tumors.

Both patients were treated with "magic bullets" — a shot through the head of search-and-kill antibodies that target in on cancer cells and destroy them in a single injection.

Researchers were so elated over their success that they are planning to treat 100 children and young adults in a trial run this year. Since the antibodies go directly to the tumor cells, few side effects result, meaning less pain and sickness for patients.

The cancer victims who were saved included an 18-year-old med student and a Dutch woman in her 30s. When the teenager found out he had cancer, he could barely walk. Today, he is completely recovered and is working as a car mechanic. The woman had tumor nodules reaching the length of her spine. She had trouble keeping her balance and couldn't control her bladder. Within a short time, she was skiing, riding a bike, and doing housework.

"Both these patients suffered from medulloblastomas, a very ugly disease," said Hugh Crankson, a neurosurgeon. "Most patients are dead in two months."

Fatal attraction

Ethel George Tschida shot himself dead while leading cops on a high-speed chase — with the corpse of his ex-sweetheart propped up in the seat next to him!

Police in Albuquerque, N. Mex., said 54-year-old Tschida shot Tina Bates and her 30-year-old companion, Rudy Jaramillo.

He put the 34-year-old girl's body in the car and led police on a race through city streets before shooting himself.

DRUGS SNUFF HIGH-SOCIETY GLAMOR GIRL

High-society stunner Louise Powell was born into a life of private yachts, posh country estates and Parisian mansions.

But the poor little rich girl threw it all away — for a hellhole apartment and a deadly heroin habit! Cops recently found the former fashion model's drug-wrecked body in a filthy, roach-infested flat, leaving her heartsick parents wondering why she traded her dream life for a nightmare.

"We've felt so helpless for so long," distraught dad Tim Powell told reporters from his lavish home in London. "We tried everything but we couldn't save her."

From the very beginning, Louise had it all — and then some. The other girls at her high-priced prep school had a pony. Lucky Louise had two.

She lived in a mansion, spent summers on the family yacht and vacationed wherever her heart desired.

But by the time she was a beautiful, brainy teenager, Louise had lost interest in everything but drugs — and dealing to support her habit. Once she swiped her mom's $7,000 gold bracelet and sold it for $100 to get a quick fix.

Her frantic parents sheltered and rehabilitated thousands of dollars to send her to world-renowned drug clinics — but the doctors said they knew no cure.

Gorgeous green-eyed Louise turned to high-fashion modeling there years ago and became an instant success. She was the toast of the town — until a dope rap landed her in jail.

"From there it was really downhill," her businessman father recalled. "We were so desperate we thought of every possibility, even sending her off to an island where she couldn't get drugs.

"Unfortunately there aren't any islands where you can't get drugs if you want them. Eventually there was nothing we could do but wait for the call we knew she'd be forced to make."

It came shortly after [redacted] drug-wracked daughter's 23rd birthday, just a few months after she sent a final message to her heartbroken mother, scrawled across a haunting snapshot of herself:

"Darling Mommy," it said. "I love you so much."

Vacuum salesman holds couple hostage for 4-hour sales pitch

Homeowners Jane and Martin Hathaway lived through a real-life horror story when they were trapped in their home by a desperate salesman [illegible] refused to leave [illegible] they bought [illegible] vacuum cleaner.

By RAFE KLINGER

"The guy was unbelievable," sighed Martin of Bristol, England.

"We were literally prisoners in our own home. He told us would spoil everything unless we bought the cleaner."

According to 26-year-old Martin, the salesman was desperate for a sale. He needed to unload one more vacuum cleaner to claim the title of top rep for his firm and won a free trip to sunny Cyprus, the resort island in the warm Mediterranean.

The contest for the trip was to end at midnight the evening he knocked on the Hathaways' door.

For the next four hours, the salesman pulled out every trick in his bag to shake the young couple.

But the Hathaways weren't about to bite. They kept telling the desperate man that their vacuum was in perfect shape.

The couple said the frantic salesman wasn't about to leave their home without a victory.

First he insisted that they were entitled to a free demonstration of the cleaning power of his vacuum.

Then he offered to drop the price of the deluxe cleaning system from $1,300 to $795.

When the Hathaways refused to buy, he said cheerfully he'd drop the required $125 deposit.

The salesman even offered to pay their first installment of $50.

When Martin complained about the price of the system, the salesman told him he could make up for the cost by quitting smoking.

The salesman even resorted to breaking down and whining:

"I'm overworked and desperate for a vacation."

But the Hathaways stood firm, refusing to give in to the persistent salesman's tactics.

Finally, they said they were able to lock the man out the door after four hours of hard sell!

"Nothing would deter him," said Martin. "He said we would spoil everything for him unless we bought the cleaner."

Anglers found cruel to fish!

The organizers of a fishing contest were fined for cruelty after a court ruled that fish, like humans and animals, feel pain.

The case went to trial in West Germany after animal protection groups complained that fish caught in the River Lippe during the contest were held in landing nets for hours before they were weighed and released.

The court heard testimony from expert witnesses and saw films of the competition before finding the organizers guilty of cruelty. They were fined $600 each.

Said a spokesman for the court: "The court found that fish can feel pain. Suffering has been clearly proved."

World's oldest farmer (he was 117 in May) says:

I saw Billy the Kid shot down like a dog!

By IRWIN FISHER

An elderly farmer saw Pat Garrett gun down Billy the Kid and says the scene was nothing like the history books describe it.

In fact, Billy knew that it was Garrett, and not some stranger, who shot him like a dog on Pete Maxwell's New Mexico ranch.

And contrary to popular belief, the Kid didn't die right off. He actually had time to turn Garrett and laugh before he breathed his last.

"Something like that, you never forget," said Juan Angelas Guerra, who was 117 years old in May and officially recognised as the oldest farmer in Mexico.

"I was a boy at it," he added, "and Billy was my hero. If I could have saved him from Garrett's gun I would have. But Garrett was too fast."

The old man told his story in Spanish to Eusebio Flavio Mata Lorenzo who is writing a book on Mexicans who made their mark on the American West.

According to recorded transcripts, Guerra was the son of a Maxwell ranch hand and got to know Billy while he was hiding out in the final weeks of his life.

On the night Billy died, the boy sat outside Maxwell's bedroom while Garrett quizzed him about the Kid.

Billy himself was preparing to carve a side of beef with a butcher knife when he heard a strange commotion on the ranch.

And when Billy walked into Maxwell's room to ask him about it, the boy almost saved his life — by warning him that Garrett was inside.

"I screamed 'Look out, Billy' — but it was too late," said Guerra. "They say Billy didn't say nothing after he was shot, that he just lay there gasping for breath until he died.

"Well, he did say something. He kept saying over and over again, 'Who done it? Who done it?' I was just a kid. I was crying. But I went over and told him it was Pat Garrett.

"Billy said, 'Well son of a bitch,' and started coughing up blood. Then he let out a laugh and died.

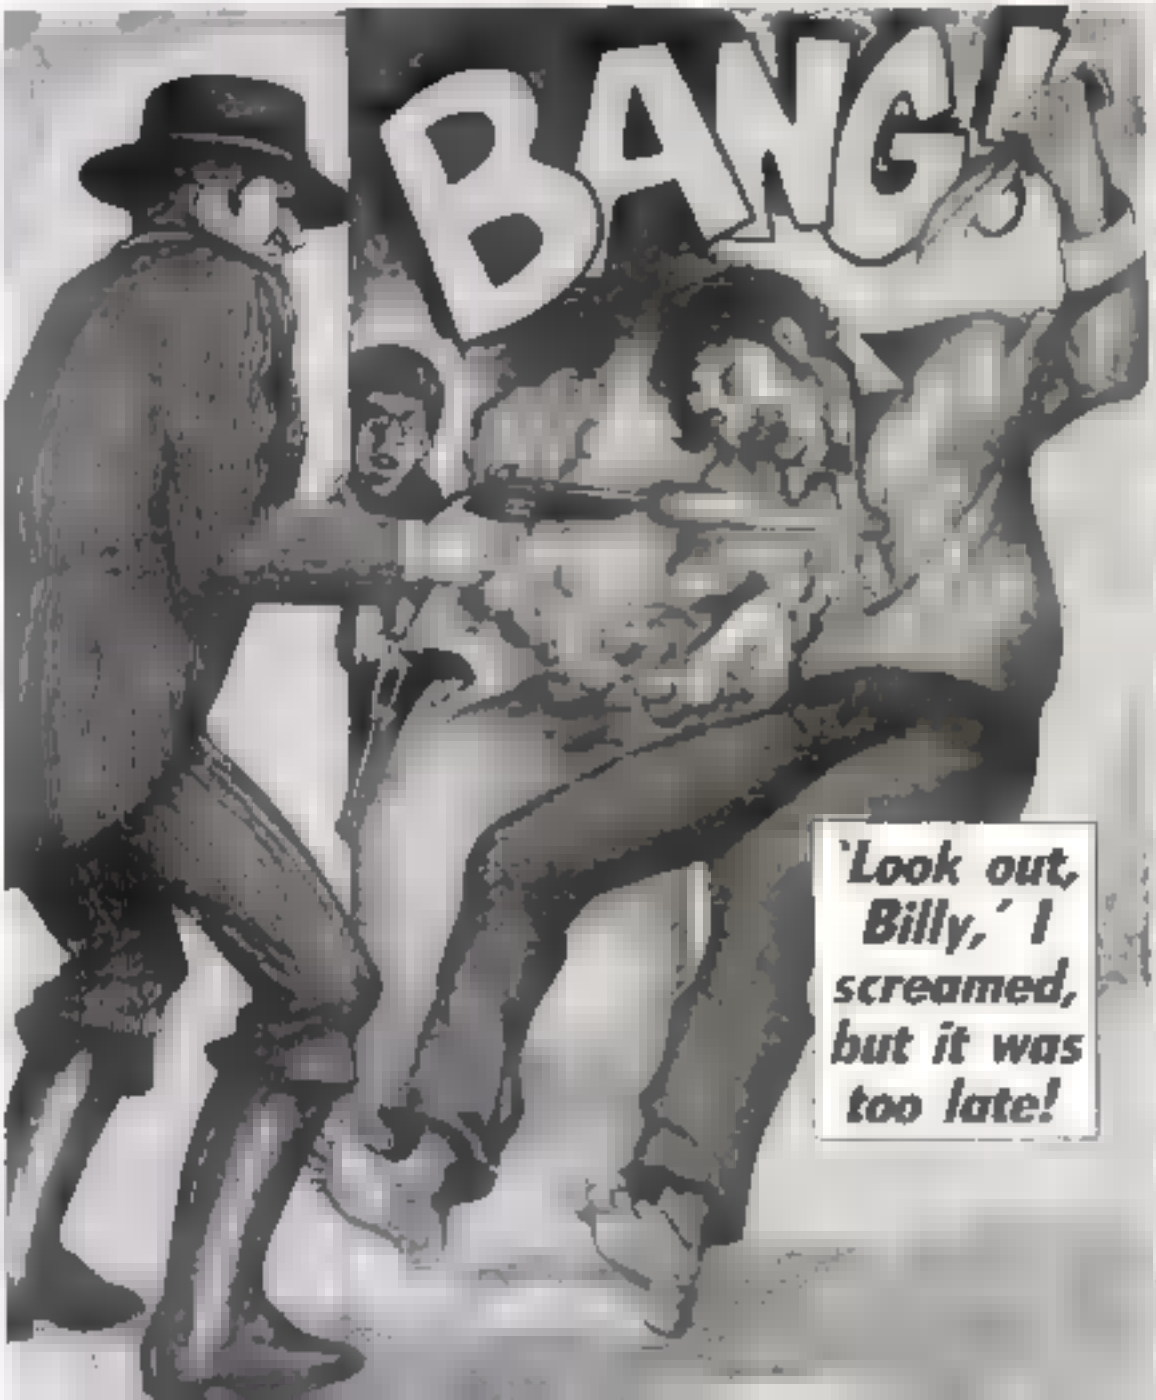
"Garrett didn't say anything at first," he continued. "Then he walked over to Billy and gave him a kick.

"He said, 'Yes, it's me Billy, and I've come for you.' After that, he left."

Guerra said he didn't set out to keep his story a secret. "It's just that until now nobody other than my friends ever asked."

Historian Lorenzo said he cannot document the old man's age with an official birth certificate because it was destroyed years ago.

But he believes Guerra is telling the truth — and Dr Salvador Rios, a former Mexican ambassador to the United Nations, has written a letter saying Guerra is the oldest man in Mexico.



Expert: Time will start running backward in 1989!

BY RAGAN DUNK

Time will stop its forward march and start running backward in 1989, causing history to repeat itself — in reverse!

That's the mind-twisting claim of Dutch physicist Jan Colson, who says the universe will stop expanding and actually begin to recede on Jan. 21, 1989.

"Einstein predicted the effect decades ago and modern methods confirm it," the expert told reporters in Amsterdam, Holland.

"The implications are staggering. Instead of growing older, people will get younger and younger until they cease to exist.

"Every baby, unborn and child who has ever lived will live again."

Dr Colson's report, set for publication, touched off a debate among scientists around the world. Better than 90 percent of physicists called the idea of time running backward "preposterous."

Others said it is possible for time to run backward, but disagree with Dr Colson's prediction that it will happen next year.

Undaunted, Dr. Colson insisted that his projection is totally accurate.

"From 1989 on time will run backward," he said. "And it will continue to run backward until the entire universe is small enough to fit on the head of a pin."

If Dr Colson is right, the older a person is today, the better.

"A 90-year-old person will have a guaranteed life span of 90 years," said Dr. Colson. "But a one-year-old baby will have only one year to live.

"Of course, the end of life will not be 'death' as we know it today.

"We will merely drift back through the bliss of infancy until we disappear.

"When our generation vanishes the previous one will rise up from the grave. They, too, will grow younger until they cease to be and the next dead generation appears."

German physicist Otto Wolf called Dr Colson's projections intriguing but farfetched.

"We physicists often wonder whether time can run backward and what might happen if it did," he told reporters.

"Personally I think time can run backward and one day will. But I don't think it's going to happen anytime soon — at least not in my lifetime."

Three feet of wood blasts through his body 'like a bullet'

Logger speared by tree limb

AMAZINGLY LUCKY Gary Crawford recovers from a freak accident at the logging unit where he works. His wife Diane looks on.

"I just knowed I was a goner. There's no way to describe the horrible pain. I prayed to Jesus to help me."

Those were the agonizing words of rugged logger Gary Crawford, who was impaled by a 36-inch tree limb that knifed through his body from his groin to his back.

Quiet Gary suffered excruciating pain for more than two hours after the freak accident at a logging unit near Stillmore, Ga.

He was loading logs into a skidder that broke off the limb which "flew right back at me like a bullet fired from a gun."

"The limb got me in the groin area before I knew what had happened," said the 31-year-old father of four. "I remember every minute of the ordeal. I asked the Lord to get the stick out of me."

Stretcher bearers for almost an hour before an ambulance arrived and rushed him 30 miles to a Savannah hospital.

"I didn't think I was gonna make it," Gary said. "I was bleeding real bad and I was in a lot of pain."

Doctors said Gary he was lucky to be alive. The limb missed major blood vessels, damaged nerves in his groin area and right leg, but only bypassed vital life-giving organs.

Memorial Medical Center five hours to remove the 3-foot-long limb.

"I'll be here when we get there," said Gary. "My right leg was throbbing and blood was everywhere."

He's lucky to be alive, say startled docs

"I still can't walk without a cane and have to have months of therapy," said Gary. "My wife Diane has been at my side during my suffering."

"I've been a logger all my life. That's all I know how to do. The good Lord worked a miracle on me and I made Him a promise. I spent religious before, but I told the Lord if He'd help me, I'd change my ways and become a Christian. I won't break that promise."

WOW! This $65,000 home was given to Joey Mitchell by generous construction workers. The 7-year-old boy faces a year-long treatment that may cost $1 million.

. . . and given to an injured boy to help pay his medical bills

By ROSE GRADY

More than 250 big hearted construction workers in Royal Palm Beach, Fla., donated their time and materials to help an injured boy pay his medical bills — by building him an $65,000 home in a single day.

[illegible]

[illegible]

The 7-year-old boy suffered severe head injuries in a bicycle-car accident on his way home from school last April 30th.

Before the accident, the family had put back their mortgage coverage to make room in their budget to build a home. But Joey's medical bills quickly ate up what little insurance money the family got.

Now the family is faced with the impossible task of paying for Joey's rehabilitation treatments — a year-long program that will cost about $1 million. To help the family out, Palm Beach County builder Wally Sanger and businessman Jim Fennema put together a plan to build a home for the family.

Sanger said, "I couldn't believe all the people who volunteered. I even received $1000 donations from people I don't even know."

Sam and Elizabeth Mitchell, Joey and sister Christi are living with a family in West Palm Beach. Joey is confined to a wheelchair and may never be able to walk again.

Mom's shocking confession:

I DROWNED MY BABY!

By PETE COOKE

A mother who had to undergo two operations in order to get pregnant became so depressed after her baby was born that she drowned her 2-month-old infant in his bath and dumped the body in the trash, cops said.

Lucrecia Gentile, 38, broke down after failing a lie detector test and confessed to killing her son Stephen, then led New York City authorities to the infant's body in a garbage can only three blocks from the family's Brooklyn apartment.

"He was lonely and she had postpartum depression," one investigator said.

"She just snapped. She had a difficult pregnancy, a difficult birth. The kid was up all night and she couldn't sleep.

The case began when Mrs. Gentile called police to report that her baby had been kidnapped.

She claimed that she had received a phone call from someone who said her 7-year-old son, John, was sick at school. Mrs. Gentile told cops that while she was picking up her older son from school, the baby was snatched from his stroller.

But the mother's story unraveled when she and her husband John, a part-time guard for the U.S. Marshall Service, were called in for lie detector tests. He passed his with flying colors, but his wife failed.

"She then made a very tearful statement in which she admitted killing her son and expressed a great deal of remorse," a police department official said.

"I put him under the water until he stopped crying," police sources quoted the mother as saying. "I couldn't take his crying anymore."

After drowning her infant son in the bathtub, Mrs. Gentile dressed the baby in a pink and blue snowsuit and white shoes, then stuffed the tiny body in a white plastic bag, authorities said.

Mrs. Gentile placed the bag in a stroller, packed it three blocks and tossed the bundle into a garbage can.

"She tried for 7 years to have child & then tossed him in the trash, say cops"

REMORSEFUL Lucrecia Gentile said she held Stephen under water because she "couldn't take his crying anymore."

TWO-MONTH-OLD Stephen Gentile was drowned in his bathtub, said authorities.

COPS carry garbage can containing Stephen's body to a waiting ambulance

"Then, more than an hour later, she called police to report that her baby had been kidnapped," the source said.

Mrs. Gentile was arrested and charged with murder. Her attorney, Joel Dershowitz, said that Mrs. Gentile underwent surgery twice in order to become pregnant with her second child.

Hunters pay to kill pet lions!

Cuddly cubs raised to be gentle grow up to be trophies

By [illegible]

On a secluded preserve in Texas, hunters fork out $3,500 for the thrill of stalking and killing African lions — that were hand-raised as pets!

In one recent kill, the lion was so terrified, the hunters had to throw rocks at it to make it leave its protective cover.

And when the beast finally did charge into the open, BAM! It was shot dead as a doornail!

"We threw rocks at it to spook him out and he charged us at that point," hunt organizer Larry Wilburn said. "We killed him at 10 feet away."

The lion hunts are staged on an island in Trinity Bay on the Texas coast, and Wilburn said he has a waiting list of hunters eager to bag a trophy without taking the time or trouble to go to The Dark Continent.

Wilburn, who's been in the "trophy" lion-hunting business now for about two years, said they're growing in popularity because they offer hunters "a better trophy at half the price."

But there are others who say lions raised as pets are definitely not fair game for any sportsman.

"That's about the most revolting, disgusting thing I've heard in a long time," declared Steve Chrisman, vice president of the Dallas Safari Club and publisher of the organization's Safari Quest magazine.

P.C. Hauck, who heads Central Texas Wildlife, an animal rights group, finds the hunts equally distasteful.

"These lions have been hand-raised as pets and are being taken out to be shot for so-called sport," he said.

"What kind of sport is it if you go out and shoot your dog and mount his head?"

Low-paid workers happiest

A startling new study says low-paid workers are happier on the job than their higher-paid counterparts.

Researchers at the University of Illinois and at the University of Pennsylvania observed a higher degree of job satisfaction, contentment and sense of job security among the lower-paid employees at the company they studied.

Workers who earn less "appear more satisfied with their jobs and more optimistic about future pay," the study concluded.

The researcher said lower-paid workers may be happier because they have lower expectations of their jobs.

Granny gives birth — to her own grandkid

By SUSAN JIMISON

Generous grandmother Pat Anthony, 49, made history when she became a surrogate mom for her own daughter. Now she's enjoying the fruits of her labor — adorable triplets named David, Jose and Paula.

The Tygerberg, South Africa, woman made her first public appearance with the trio of tots when she, her daughter Karen, and her son-in-law Alcino Ferreira Jorge, brought the kids to Paris for a television interview.

Proud big brother Alcino Jr., 2, came along to help care for the triplets.

"I am very proud of my grandchildren," said the part-time dietitian, who offered to help her daughter because Karen can no longer have children. "I don't feel they are my own children because, although I bore them in my body they were created from Karen's eggs and Alcino's sperm," said the grandmother.

PROUD grandmother Pat Anthony left poses with her daughter and son-in-law Karen and Alcino Ferreira Jorge and their kids.

LEO

July 23-Aug. 22

Your health should be tip-top for the foreseeable future — so get out and have some fun.

If your birthday is this week . . .

The year ahead promises to be one of the most eventful of your life. New friends make a dramatic and most welcome impact. Your social life and finances appear to be on the upswing as well.

A disappointing setback later this summer actually works to your benefit, teaching a valuable lesson and putting you on the road to great success. Likewise, a spiritual experience is going to change your life for the better — forever.

Any self-improvement projects you tackle this year will pay short dividends.

AQUARIUS

Jan. 20-Feb. 18

You are naturally fair-minded and don't take advantage of a situation even if you have the upper hand. But others do it to you, so wise up.

Don't be a sucker.

Get sound advice from friends and business associates in the week ahead where finances are involved. But always make your own decisions.

Get off of your high horse, honey, and try to work your way back into the real world.

PISCES

Feb. 19-Mar. 20

Your Pisces tendency to be unrealistic may be keeping you from getting ahead in life. Try to see life as it really is.

You may be up to your eyeballs in problems this week. Keep your mind cleared of trivial things so that you can handle the important situations.

This may be the perfect week to launch projects you've been putting off.

Quit procrastinating and make the week profitable.

She's taken The Pill and been sterilized but . . .

AMAZING MOM CAN'T STOP HAVING BABIES!

By JACK ALEXANDER

Incredible Christine Durham is a human baby machine who has been sterilized and taken The Pill — and still had seven children.

The amazing mum and her husband Tommy love their kids dearly, but are almost afraid to have sex any more.

"We wouldn't part with the children for anything in the world," said Christine, 33, of Darlington, England. "But we are terrified of having any more."

Their first shock was last Tuesday, when 13 Christine was on The Pill following the birth of Katrina, 10, when he was born.

The couple planned to have Nichola, 10, John, 8, and Andy, 4. But Charlotte Jane, 6, was born AFTER Christine had sterilization surgery.

"The biggest shock of all however was little Frankie, who arrived six months ago," said the former mother. "Not only had I been sterilized, but I was back on The Pill as well.

"I thought the combination of the two was bound to stop our baby boom, but it didn't."

The couple considered getting Tommy, 38, "fixed," but he is terrified of having a vasectomy.

A spokesman for the Family Planning Association agreed it is "quite unusual" for a woman to give birth after being sterilized.

"Perhaps they should consider condoms," he said.

MUMMY: Baby machine Christine Durham right with hubby Tommy and their seven kids.

Murder-for-hire millionaire hangs himself in jail cell

By PETE COOKE

Sinister millionaire Bob Spearman hanged himself in a prison cell after authorities uncovered his plans to escape in a stolen helicopter and kill the prosecutor who sent him up for murdering his wife.

"I think it's very ironic that he killed himself when it was me he wanted to get," said prosecutor Norm Lauch when she was notified of Spearman's suicide in a Florida prison.

"I definitely felt threatened by his latest plan to kill me," the West Palm Beach prosecutor said. "So many bizarre things have happened with this case."

Spearman, 58, made national headlines in 1986, when his shocking plot to have his cancer-stricken wife Anita murdered came unravelled.

In court, Spearman listened with tears in his eyes as Mrs. Lauch presented evidence that the marina owner hired killers through an ad in Soldier of Fortune magazine and paid them $20,000 to kill his wife, who was beaten to death in the couple's home while recovering from cancer surgery.

Robert Spearman

Spearman was convicted of first-degree murder and sentenced to life plus 20 years behind bars.

Two years after Spearman's scheme to get the prosecutor was crushed, he county authorities investigated reports that Spearman paid a friend $7,000 to arrange the murder of Mrs. Lauch, the prosecutor.

No charges were filed at that instance, but he was promptly indicted in an elaborate scheme to break out of a state prison located near Tampa.

After prison officials got wind of Spearman's plan they arranged for two undercover agents to contact him. Spearman paid the two agents, who posed as pilots, $4,700 to steal a helicopter and outfit him out of the prison yard.

Spearman promised to pay the duo a total of nearly $50,000, instructing them to bring two machine guns and four hand grenades so he could "take care of the prosecutor who put him in prison," officials said.

Two days after Spearman's scheme to get the prosecutor was crushed, he was found hanging in his cell in the isolation unit where he'd been locked.

"I was told that he would be a threat to me as long as he was alive and had the money to pay somebody to do his bidding," Mrs. Lauch said. "And then, two days later, I found out he committed suicide."

Cops: Woman's corpse was a horrible hood ornament!

A man driving down the street with his wife's body on the hood of his car told cops he was just trying to get her to a hospital — after stabbing her in self-defense.

Authorities in Pensacola, Fla., said Robert Lee Hawthorne was charged with first-degree murder despite his bizarre explanation for how his wife's corpse ended up on the hood of the car.

Det. Ken Franks said Hawthorne told investigators that he and his wife Mary were riding around Pensacola in his 1977 Thunderbird when an argument erupted.

According to Hawthorne's account of the incident, his 40-year-old wife suddenly pulled a .38-caliber automatic pistol from her purse, but before she could squeeze the trigger, he wrestled the gun away from her and held it out of her reach.

By PETE COOKE

But then, the 36-year-old drywall hanger said his wife grabbed a fishing knife and tried to stab him. Hawthorne said that as he and his wife struggled for the knife she was stabbed in the chest.

When Hawthorne finally stopped the car his wife staggered out and collapsed on the ground. Hawthorne raced into a nearby office to summon help, but office workers couldn't understand what the frantic man was saying.

Hawthorne ran back outside and tried to pull his wife back into the car, but couldn't because she was too heavy. He managed to hoist her onto the hood of the car, then drove slowly down the street where he was spotted by three motorcycle cops.

"It was freaky," said Officer Carlos Padilla. "When he saw us he started flagging us down. We took our guns out."

Padilla said he and the other officers handcuffed Hawthorne before checking the wife's condition.

"Then we rolled her over," the officer said. "We saw a good bit of blood."

Padilla said the woman was already dead.

Det. Franks said the hand gun was found in Mrs. Hawthorne's purse and Hawthorne was charged with murder because authorities doubt his version of how the stabbing occurred.

Cops put bite on litterbugs

Sheriff's deputies are getting down and dirty in the pursuit of lawbreakers near Brandon, Miss.

They're searching roadside litter for clues to who deposited the junk and trashing down the culprits with great success.

Two people were told to clean up their trash or face arrest after deputies found letters and addresses in the bags of garbage tossed along a roadside.

"They dumped two bags each and I gave them four big garbage bags and told them to go up there and fill them up," said Sheriff J.B. Terrence.

Litterbugs in Mississippi face a fine of up to $500 but Sheriff Terrence agreed not to press charges if the trash troopers cleaned up after themselves.

How to Live In Mexico on $300 a Month

(Special) Live in one of North America's best climates on a beautiful 60-mile long lake nestled in the mountains. Over 25,000 Americans live here comfortably, many on social security or small pensions. For about $10 a day each, two people can live in a spacious home, eat good food, have a cook, housekeeper and gardener, and have money left over for entertainment or savings.

The new book Paradise Found: How To Live In North America's Best Climate For Under $300 A Month tells you all about this retirement haven: how to get there, where to stay, where to eat, what to do, how to save extra money, how to buy a home at ridiculous prices.

Why do so many Americans live in this retirement community? Here's why:

+ Low cost of living. They are ridiculously low. Recent Peso devaluations make this part of Mexico one of the cheapest places to live in the entire world. You can get a nice hotel room for $7 a night. Full course meals for $2. You can have a maid, gardener or cook for about $20 an hour. Many Americans live comfortable on social security or small pensions.

+ The climate. It's near perfect year round. You're almost never too hot or too cold. It's often called the world's best climate.

+ Beautiful Surroundings. You're on a magnificent lake, 60 miles long nestled in the mountains. Fresh breeze, clean, unpolluted air. You'll see stunning colors. Blue water, green mountains, red and yellow flowers. You can travel the entire world and never see such an enchanting place. The book has plenty of photographs so you can judge for yourself the beauty of this haven.

+ Live in a community of other Americans. This retirement haven has an American library, medical care, American style shopping facilities, clubs and many social activities. What's more, the local people treat you with warmth and kindness. They love Americans. And you're never too far away from home. You can drive here in a few days from anywhere in the U.S. By air, you're just a few hours away.

The book also gives you practical advice on living in Mexico: health care, laws, travel, customs, food and water, selecting a home, making extra money. Whether you're looking for a place to retire, a low-cost vacation spot or some place to get away from it all, this place has something for you.

If you are fed up with high living costs, bad weather, congestion, pollution, crime, too much stress and wonder why more retirement haven is thousands of miles Americans are already living.

Revenge of the sneaky hubby

By JACK ALEXANDER

Ailing widow says he tied up her money in a trust fund — because he didn't want her to have any fun

An aged widow says her spiteful hubby tied up half their money in a trust fund before he died so she wouldn't have too much fun without him.

"He told a nurse he was going to put it in a trust fund so I couldn't have a good time," said Ardis Spencer, 66.

Her late husband, Robert, who died two years ago at the age of 68, opened a trust fund with $103,000 at a St. Petersburg, Fla., bank before he passed on.

His widow was allowed to withdraw half the money and the interest on the other half.

But the bank was the trustee of the principal on the other half which he left to the Shriners.

The distraught widow claims the $103,000 was amassed almost entirely on her salary as a teacher in Indiana.

Her thrifty hubby made her hand over almost every paycheck as he could bank it, she claims.

"It was all mine. His money all went to cats, cats," said Mrs. Spencer.

After her hubby's death, the desperate widow needed medical care and wound up in a nursing home. She was forced to withdraw her half of the trust.

But her bills began to mount when she went home.

The bank said the interest on the other half of the trust wasn't sufficient to cover her expenses.

Mrs. Spencer tried to get her hands on the principal, but the bank said it belonged to the Shriners.

The desperate widow tried to get the bank replaced as trustee of the trust by a name, but was told that would take a court order.

The Shriners are fighting that because the money will go in their Hospitals for Crippled Children when Mrs. Spencer dies. They want the bank to control the trust, not a niece.

Lawyers for the Shriners have filed a suit in St. Petersburg asking for an injunction to stop Mrs. Spencer from transferring the trusteeship.

Safari park horror

By EAGAN DUNN

When you tell a tiger, "Let's do lunch," make sure you're on time.

That grim warning comes from Indonesian wildlife officials after a pair of safari park rangers were eaten alive when they showed up late with the big cats' meal!

The latest victim, 23-year-old Teuku Kahal, was approximately 15 minutes behind schedule when he was attacked and killed, said officials.

Kaslan Inaldo, 32, met the same fate for his carelessness. Between the two men the cats left nothing but Kahal's holstered revolver — and one of Inaldo's wingtip shoes.

"We told them and told them again about being late with food for the tigers but they wouldn't listen," Norman Hendra, director of the safari park west of Jakarta, informed reporters. "This can't go on," he added. "We've understaffed as it is."

The safari park's six Bengal tigers eat raw meat and like to be fed at nine, noon and three, said Hendra. Unlike cats in the wild, they are accustomed to eating on schedule.

They actually begin to eye the park's other animals if they aren't served on time.

"Teuku Kahal was new on the job and didn't realize how hungry the cats were when he got out of his truck to feed them," said Hendra.

"But Inaldo has been with us for years. He should have known better."

applicants for the job are being screened carefully to make sure they are emotional, said Hendra.

"I'm telling them that the job is on-the-job training," he added. "The cats will

Sean Kalin says his mom kidnapped him and ran off to Florida, but the 10-year-old escaped to his dad four days later — and now he's suing his mother for damages!

In a lawsuit filed in New York State Supreme Court, Sean and his attorney are asking for a whopping $1.5 million in damages. The suit claims the boy suffered assault, abduction, false imprisonment and emotional distress in the incident.

camera films a roomful of ghosts!

By HENRY WEBER

A television camera filmed a procession of wailing ghosts after an employee left it running in an empty studio, station executives report.

"You can fake a lot of things in a television station but nothing like this," Josef Schuller, program director, told reporters in Linz, Austria.

"There are at least 50 spectres that appear on the film and they look like something out of the Middle Ages. They're wailing and crying and when they flit by the camera you can actually see horror in the background.

"It's like watching a peek-slip on what it was like in the 14th century during the Black Death."

In fact, the station was built on the site of a village that was wiped out by the plague in 1366 said Schuller.

Paranormal researcher Dr. Hans Ransing has studied the amazing film. And he thinks it depicts a scene that occurred just before the village died out.

"The film crackles with emotion — you can actually feel it," said the expert. "I truly believe that the people, the apparitions that appear, are genuine.

"They are what's left of a village that died out over 600 years ago on this very site."

Program director Schuller said the film rolled for almost 20 minutes before a cameraman found it running and turned it off.

Incredibly, the man didn't notice anything unusual going on even though he walked in front of the camera and appears alongside a ghost on the film.

"That sort of thing is certainly not unheard of," said Dr. Ransing. "I personally believe that ghosts are all around us, but invisible because we unconsciously tune them out.

"That would explain why this cameraman could appear with a ghost on film and not realize it.

"The same thing happens when people take pictures at family gatherings only to have a dead relative show up on their snapshots. Copies of the film have been given to experts for further analysis.

INTERVIEW WITH MARIE LEWIS

HOW I LOST 39 LBS. IN 29 DAYS

while I continued eating everything I like!

SO CAN YOU OR MONEY BACK!

Marie's friends couldn't believe their eyes. People she hadn't seen for awhile almost went into shock and even those she met daily had a problem believing what they saw. Because losing 39 pounds in 29 days is no small deal and it doesn't go unnoticed when one loses an average of over 1¼lbs. a day!

When I weighed 176 lbs., I had a problem getting out of my chair.

Today, after losing 39 lbs., I go dancing and play tennis with my children again.

Q You weighed 176 lbs. and went down to 137 lbs. in less than a month. What happened?

First of all, don't think that I've waited until I weighed 176 lbs. to try to lose. I started to become overweight when I was in my late [illegible] and I've been trying to lose weight for many, many years. I've been on all kinds of diets, I've seen doctors, I've been to spas and I spent a fortune on consultations and pills, but nothing helped. On the contrary, I kept gaining weight.

Anytime, one day I learned about a new weight loss program, OUTLINE. I decided to try it and here I am. For the first time in my life, I was actually able to lose weight, a lot of weight, while I continued to eat all the foods I crave, pizzas, burgers, hot dogs, chocolate cake, ice cream . . . name it. I had my [illegible] as usual. I went to restaurants, I simply went on with my routine, but I lost weight.

Q You say that you lost about 1¼lbs. a day while you continued eating as usual. How can that be?

I know that some of the people reading my story will find that hard to believe. The only thing I can say to those people is that I probably believed less in this then they do today when I decided to try OUTLINE. You see, when you weigh 176 lbs. and have had nothing but disappointments, you stop believing. At that point, either you give up or [illegible] trying. I'm lucky I tried OUTLINE. My problem has always been that I crave the wrong foods. But I never stopped eating and still lost 39 lbs. in only 29 days.

Q But hasn't it always been impossible to lose weight while eating fattening foods?

I know it may sound contradictory. But losing weight while eating fattening foods IS no longer impossible if you let OUTLINE help you to flush out built-up excess fat while you eat everything you like. That's exactly what makes things so easy with OUTLINE. You don't have to change your routine. You may continue having your usual meals, keep going to your favorite fast food places and restaurants, and still lose weight.

Q How do you feel now that you're slim?

Absolutely great! My life has completely changed. I've bought a new wardrobe and now I'm getting admiring looks. No more 'look at that fat lady' looks. And I feel much younger and healthier too.

Q Do you have a message for our readers who are still struggling with a [illegible] overweight problem? Any Advice?

What I'd like to say is this: If you're like I used to be, I know that by now you must have tried about everything and that you must be feeling pretty discouraged. Logically speaking, I don't see why the only thing that ever worked for me, a compulsive junk food eater, wouldn't work for you too. OUTLINE helped me to finally get thin and it was fast and easy. For my part, I thank God I decided to give it a try. That's all I can say. The rest is up to you.
